Holnam had a good year. No exploration as such. It has exploration type data from its predecessor and from the old magnetite mines. It is now operating on 19 benches. It has reached the height of land and is able to push back its benches. It still ships a mix of chemical, cement and agricultural limestone. It differentiates quality on basis of physical criteria (colour, crystallinity etc.). Production in 1994 around 3,000,000 tonnes. Up from the year before. Partly because of a fill job at Robert's Bank. Expects the same next year. Expanding its stockpile range to enable it to take advantage of spot orders. (Harold Diggons pers comm December, 1994).
