Dear Gordon;

Enclosed is a copy of our lithogeochem data for Tamihi Creek. Sorry that it's still in rough form but I haven't been able to get it up to the top of our draftsman's pile yet!

I agree that the rocks are very similar to Westmin's Buttle Lake area. Unfortunately, there is lots of pyrite but very little encouragement in terms of base or precious metals. Likewise there is little evidence of the good sericitic alteration that the Westmin deposits have. However, the geology is very complex and the exposure none too good in places so it could still be there.

Best of luck with your exploration in 1984.
